SHE WAS AN ADVENTURESS. The annulment by Judge Beach in the Superior Court Tuesday of the marriage of Walter M. Dunk, a well known artist and magazine illustrator, to Eleanore Gilmore, in Philadelphia, in 1886, revals a remarkable story of the infatuation of a susceptible artist for his beautiful model, followed by marriage and the rude awakening from the ro-mance when gullible husband found that he was the victim of a siren as designing as she was charming, who did not scruple to encompass spurious marriage and divorce certificates in order that she might be his wife.

Dunk in 1882 was one of Philadelphia's leaders in the art world, in which Bohemianism played some part. He was president of the Sketch Club, a director in the Art Club and prominent in the literary circles of the Quaker city. He had a fine studio, and as he often painted from life he one day asked his friend Frederick L. Pitts, a brother artist, if he knew of a young woman of faultless form and face who would like to pose for him.

Pitts introduced to him a Miss Eleanore Gilmore, and as she pleased Dunk's artistic eye he engaged her to display her charms so that they might be transferred to canvas. Business relations between the two were succeeded by feelings of frendship, and after a time Eleanore confided to the sympathetic artist that she was a deserted wife, cast off by Irwin Claus, and that she was obliged to enter his studio in order to gain her daily bread.

He was all the more ready to believe this, as she showed him a marriage certificate, signed by Dr. Pepper, of the Central Methodist Episcopal Church, of Philadelphia. Six weeks after she gave birth to a child in St. Matthew's Lying-in-Hospital, but her forlorn condition only served to render the artist more only served to render the artist more interested in her.

Love succeeded his concern, and admiration for his engaging, though unfortunate, model, and finally he proposed marriage. The other husband was the only obstacle, but Eleanore brushed away that impediment by going to Brooklyn and returning with diverse rappers signed apparently by ing to Brooklyn and returning with di-voice papers signed apparently by Judge Pratt, of the Kings County Su-preme Court. The course of love could then run smoothly enough, and the ro-mantic attachment began in Bohemia was sealed by a wedding at her aunt's house, in Twelich street, in the city of Brotherly Love. She was artistic in taste, too, and she cultivated her desire for distinction in the histrionic line by taking lersons at several schools of acting while her husband worked away

They lived in apparent perfect enjoyment until 1889, when Durk discovered that his wife held her vows lightly. Wishing, however, to avoid the disgrace of bringing suit for divorce on a scandalous charge, he, through his at-torney. Allen W. Gangewer, agreed to allow her to secure the dec him by alleging desertion. In her allegations, however, she falsely alleged that he had deserted her for two years, which, it seems, was not the case. His lawyer, bowever, said that to avoid complications it would be better to al-had committed perjury.

Durk was too glad to be rid of her to quibble about the means, and he continued to pay his wife alimony and tried to forget the painful denouement to his studio flirtation in increased devotion to art. He is impressionable, however, and eighteen months ago met his second fate and he determined once more to tempt the rapids of matrimony. He became heir in the meantime to $100,000, and he learned in the meanwhile that the divorce could be reopen-ed by a third party on account of his wife's alleged perjury. This deter-mined him to cut loose all the bonds and, as he had heard various unpleasand, as he had heard various dupleas ant rumors as to his wife, he determin-ed to do what he should have done at first, investigate her career thoroughly.

No man in Philadelphia was more startled than he when he found that there was no record of his wife's marriage or divorce to Claus either in Philadelphia or Brooklyn, and that Mr. Claus freely acknowledged that she was never his wife.

Dunk was then convinced that he was the dupe of a designing adven-turess, and a year ago he brought suit to annul his marriage with her on the ground of misrepresentation and fraud. In the meanwhile he had taken a studio at No. 32 Chambers street, Philadeland all the time, forever. Evidence accumulated as to the fraudulency of the papers and her numerous liaisons, and everywhere he went he was startled by tales of his wife's doings. She brazenly denied all his allegations, however, and succeeded in having the case put off frequently till a short time ago, when she went to Europe and failed to appear to defend herself. It seems she married, not long ago, the son of a prominent manufacturing chemist in Philadelphia, and with him she is now doing the Continent.

She is a plump blonde, with very winning ways and a face and figure that invariably draw.—N. Y. Herald.

HOLIDAY GOODS. The Christmas Tree

THE wheel of time is spinning around-next thing you know it will be Christmas. The

HE wheel of time is spanning around—next thing you know it will be Christmas. The thought of it brings to mind all the joys of generous giving. Quietly you must begin to make your allotments—this to that one—and that to the other. What shall this and that be? The serviceable is the sensible.

We are all ready to begin the Holiday campaign. A stock of usefuls—touched with the dainty fingers of oddity and originality—just what everyoody will be glad to receive—and just what you may be proud to give. And when you add up the cost for all—for all hands—you are going to be surprised how far your dollars have gone.

We have got this advice to give—while never in the fifty odd years we have kept store have we had such an immense variety as will greet you now—it will be wise to shop early and keep out of the jam of the last days. So get out your pencil and paper and make up your list.
